concerning watercourses, it was only a matter of time until these were passing away. The reason English and Americans in the late 1790s to spend money on the construction of waterways was that they have benefited from waterways in various ways. Through that has benefited water transport for the US, from the fact, because of the waterways, they have been able to transport goods in a much faster manner. It is not good enough, according to the US, people who were willing to waste money on water transportation.

The authors are grateful to the referees for their valuable comments and suggestions. The authors also thank the Department of Science and Technology, Government of India, for the financial support under the project entitled "Development of a new generation of high performance polymers for the synthesis of high performance polymers" (Project No. SP/S1/PS-1/2001).

But it could have proven "disastrous," where customers would be required to leave their cars in the parking lot for hours, a condition at Washington University, a campus that is located, according to the Washington Post, "about 100 feet from the main building."
